The Next Voice You Hear: Sermons We Preach Together

Synopsis

This book is a collection of dramatic, participatory sermons that involve members of the congregation in the act of preaching. These readings, dramas, and dialogue sermons are the results of experiments at the author's own church. When he and his congregation tried preaching together with "more than one voice," they found themselves being touched by God's grace in unusual and dramatic ways.

David Steele is Pastor Emeritus of Christ Presbyterian Church in Terra Linda, San Rafael, California. He is the author of several books, a frequent public speaker and retreat leader, and columnist for The Presbyterian Outlook.

I knew the author, had read the book before and it is exactly what I expected

This book has been a wonderful addition to our worship services. The dramas are often funny always touching and I have had many comments indicating that the message was heard more clearly than it would have been in any sermon I could write. Do yourself and your congregation a favor and buy and use this book. I suggest that you start with Send Claude!
