Rachel Howe is a personal trainer, author and competitive triathlete from California. She holds a master of science degree in exercise and sport science in addition to a number of fitness industry certifications and accreditations. She has one daughter and a loving husband. She is an healthy eating enthusiast and her spare time she can often be found either cooking, jogginh, hiking or cycling with the family.

All the exercises are so simple and can be found online. I thought there would be some things I already didn't know. I'm a personal trainer and know at least a hundred exercises that are better then the ones I saw in the book.

These are more exercises to do at home than at the gym. They are super easy and effective!

Works! Toning thighs is not easy. This book makes it doable.

good detailed list and pictures of what to doable to follow easily and everything can be done at home

I found this book to be lacking in explanation I had hoped for a more in-depth description and photos of the exercises (with real people).

If you are already an exercise enthusiast, then you're probably already familiar with these. If you've just decided to start working on developing killer legs, these are, hands down, the very best exercises available and, best of all, little to no equipment is required. I love that the book contains illustrations showing proper form.
