Roger Price and Leonard Stern created Mad Libs in the 1950s and the series has been a favorite among kids of all ages ever since. Although Roger Price passed away in 1990, Leonard Stern keeps the tradition alive by writing new Mad Libs all the time. Roger Price and Leonard Stern are both well known for their comedywriting. In the 1950s Roger Price created and developed cartoons called Doodles, which were turned into a television show. Before that Price worked with Bob Hope on a newspaper humor column, and he even appeared on Broadway in Tickets, Please! Leonard Stern has an equally colorful and varied history. Before co-founding Price Stern Sloan with Roger Price (Sloan came later), Stern was a successful television writer. In addition to his creative involvement with over twenty television series and over ten motion pictures, Stern worked with Jackie Gleason in New York writing the Honeymooners. He also wrote for the Phil Silvers Show, The Steve Allen Show, and wrote and produced the original Get Smart television series. Recently,

Stern published A Martian Wouldn't Say That, which compiled weird and wacky memos written by people in the entertainment industry. Currently, Stern serves as a senior vice president of Price Stern Sloan, where he still writes those hilarious Mad Libs. copyright © 2000 by Penguin Putnam Books for Young Readers. These books have been the BEST tool to get my ADHD kindergartener reading. Short, silly and a fun bonding game for Mom & son :)

So fun for 4-8 yr old. They do have some words I don't like the kids to use like stupid, fart, dumb but I just read over them or tell they can't use those ones.

Perfect for the young ones, includes suggested words which helps avoid the constant use of body parts as nouns.

Great!

6 yr. old daughter loves and I love that I am teaching her nouns - verbs - adjectives - etc. ahead of her time and she's loving it! Can be played alone as well.

This was a gift for a friend's kids and they like it.

The kids love love love these

Grandchildren prefer regular Mad Libs.
