"Well, I sort of don't trust anybody who doesn't like Led Zeppelin." -Jack White

Author and publisher, Benjamin Darling's favorite month is Zeptember. In 1980, the year John Bonham died, he and his high school friend, Paul engineered a stereo set-up with a multiple amplifiers and humongous speakers. They played Fool In the Rain so loud the windows rattled, the neighbors complained, the authorities were called and the 'super stereo' was never heard from again... Mellowed only slightly by age, he has been known to rock out, hard, in his Volvo (when his wife and daughter aren't there to scold him.) His love for Led Zepelin and their lyrics and his collection of old children's readers and grade school primers fell together, serendipitously, one day (like the old Reese's Peanut Butter cup commercials) and a book was born.

I believe this is just making money off the Led Zeppelin name.Great title but doesn't live up to it. Everyone knows the lyrics.

Who would have thunk it? Zeppelin has lessons in their lyrics! Gotta love that!

So cool

Such a cute book.
