NPR Driveway Moments Moms: Radio Stories That Won't Let You Go

Synopsis

Stories from the National Public Radio archives celebrate moms and motherhood. Stories so compelling you'll stay in your car to hear them through even if you're sitting in your own driveway. Wait Wait | Don't Tell Me! host Peter Sagal captures your attention with colorful tales for and about moms. Heard in All Things Considered, Weekend Edition, News & Notes, and other NPR programs, these stories and more are for moms, moms-to-be, and anyone who has ever known or had a mother.

I gave this as a birthday gift to a special friend. She raved about its contents. I can't wait to listen myself.

My husband gave this to me for Mother's Day this year. It's a wonderful collection of two discs full of stories and anecdotes, and they are all different enough from each other that listening does not get old. There were some segments I actually listened to twice. My favorite was probably "Mother's Day vs. Fishing Season Opener." Maybe that's because I live in Minnesota, but I'm sure it has universal appeal. The segment "Mementos Honor Sons Lost to War" brought tears to my eyes, as did the story about the grandma with Alzheimer's. There may have been a few segments that were not true driveway moments for me, but every single one of them was worth a listen. And a few of them have left pretty deep imprints in my mind. I recommend this collection!

My husband bought this for me to keep me entertained (and off the phone) during all the driving I do for work. It was terrific - funny, heartfelt, and diverting. I let my mother borrow it - she said it was "interesting to hear about mothers these days" - I am not sure from that comment, but it might be that this CD is funnier to younger moms. I still crack up remembering storyteller Kevin Kling describing his mother's purse in his Minnesotan accent - priceless!

checked it out at my local public library and listened to it in one day. it will make you cry and laugh hysterically. love, love, love it. all moms and/or daughters must read!!!!
