I was absolutely amazed reading Liz Shaw-Stabler's story of her life long struggles with systemic Lupus. While reading her story I was awaiting my own lab results for Lupus so I hung on her every word. Every time the Wolf reared it's ugly head on Liz, and it was often, I anguished the whole time she went through an attack on one organ or another, some life-threatening, her countless hospital stays, her pain and how long the Wolf hung on each time. She's an amazingly strong, determined woman who fought the Wolf her whole life and survived its every attack. I admire Liz and her phenomenal strengths both physical and mental. As it turns out my lab results came back positive for discoid Lupus not systemic Lupus. Yes, I'm relieved my organs aren't involved but I'll still be battling my own Wolf on every front just like Liz. And even though I don't have systemic Lupus my doctor told me there's a chance, albeit low, Discoid can turn into Systemic so I'm being carefully monitored and need to see my doctor every 4 months for blood work. I highly recommend this book!!!

Anyone with a chronic health disease! Very heart warming and true. I have Lupus! I could relate to her as if it was me.

This is a very relatable book for people with lupus and other chronic diseases. It takes you through the author's personal journey with the disease and explains specific medical terms and experiences throughout. This allows the reader to develop true empathy and get a better understanding of medical jargon in context. It was an easy read and very informative.

Full of information pertinent to my case.

This book has absolutely changed my life! I have a close family member with Lupus and I could relate to almost every word of Liz's story. The way Liz is able to balance such a serious illness and her many struggles with the disease, along with humor, a positive attitude, and her determination to stay in control of her life is SO inspiring. Everyone needs to read this, not just those with a chronic illness, but there is so much to gain from her faith, determination, and advocacy for herself that anyone can benefit from this. It's also a fun read as she mixes in some of her stunning personality!! hope to read more from this Author, I would love to meet her and talk with her more! This is a MUST read!!!!!!

Really interesting and written well. As a fellow Lupus sufferer it gave me information I may need. I also could identify with the writer. I have had a lot of the same set backs.
